Author Brad Parks to bring new book to town for Easter event — and a visit from the Easter Bunny

A-ward-winning author Brad Parks will make a special appearance this week to discuss his latest novel, Say Nothing: A crime thriller set under the shadow of Virginia’s tidewater.

Parks, an English teacher at Chesapeake Community College, will be in town for the Washington County Tourism Commission’s annual Earth Day festival, wine tasting — and to celebrate the release of his new book.

"Say Nothing is his first stand-alone novel," said art teacher Sonja Smith. "It’s an impressive debut, and I hope to see many more from this talented young writer.

"It’s a page-turner, and I think it will appeal to a broad audience, including those who normally don’t read crime fiction."

The main action of Say Nothing takes place in Gloucester County. There are also scenes set in Norfolk, Newport News and Mathews County.

Parks said, “Someone familiar with the region will recognize many of the places and people in this novel.”

Christchurch students to present Spring Showcase

The Christchurch School Acting One Class will pres-ent its Spring Showcase at 7 p.m. April 7 in the David and Wendy Charlton Fine & Performing Arts Center on the school’s campus, 90 Thack-er Lane, Christchurch. “Voices of Our Own” is a compilation of student-chosen pieces combined into an eclectic dramatic experience. The excerpts are personal and express specifically their own viewpoints and passions for the spoken world.

“I didn’t set out to develop a show with this theme,” said director Mark Parsons. “I wanted to provide the stu-dents an opportunity to work on something in which they could connect personally and with sincerity.”

The performance will begin and end with choral readings featuring the entire class. The opener is a social consciousness selection entitled “Suicidal Human- ity” by Mark Halliday. The final is a selection from Frances Fitchcoke’s work “The Long Road Home.”

on the earth and to the heavens.

In the midst of the woodlands and meadows, wetlands and park

And I will put up a tent in the Rejoice, O bride of Lamb.

For you have come to your
